

10-year-old wins “epic” drum battle

Nandi Bushell, a 10-year-old drummer, who has become famous showcasing her amazing musical talents on social media, recently challenged Foo Fighters super-star, Dave Grohl, to a drum battle and was declared the winner! Nandi has also received praise for her brilliant performances from Rage Against the Machine's Tom Morello and Metallica's Kirk Hammett. She plays the drums, bass and electric guitar in her videos. After the drum-off Nandi tweeted, “It was an honour to be part of the most #EPIC #ROCK in battle in #HISTORY! With the most awesome, fun, kind and legendary #DaveGrohl! Thank you for giving me this incredible opportunity. I am extremely grateful. The Rock Gods of old are happy!” To which the rock star replied, “You win round one....but it ain't over yet! Buckle up, cuz I have something special in mind... Stay tuned, Dave.”

Pictured: Nandi Bushell and Dave Grohl during their drum battle, taken from Nandi's Twitter page.

3,200-megapixel photo of broccoli

Pictured: The camera and some of the images that have been taken, from the SLAC National Accelerator Laboratory's Twitter page.

Crews at the Department of Energy's SLAC National Accelerator Laboratory have taken the first 3,200-megapixel digital photos. The largest ever taken in a single shot, with an extraordinary array of imaging sensors that will become the largest camera in the world. This camera will be housed at the Vera Rubin Observatory in Chile. The telescopic camera will explore cosmic mysteries as part of the observatory's Legacy Survey of Space and Time (LSST), a catalogue of galaxies and of the movements of countless astrophysical objects. For now, though, scientists are testing the giant camera's capabilities by taking photos of broccoli. They say that the intricate shapes found in the Romanesco version of this plant are a good check that the three-billion-pixel camera can capture lots of detail.

Comedy Wildlife Photography Awards

The finalists of this year's Comedy Wildlife Photography Awards have been announced. This year's finalists show wild animals in a variety of comedy moments. They include: a fish that appears to smile, a bear giving a friendly wave from afar, a photobombing giraffe, a seal that looks like it's laughing, a vomiting penguin, a baboon scratching it's bottom, and a very grumpy sea turtle. The awards were founded by Paul Joynson-Hicks and Tom Sullam, both professional photographers and passionate conservationists. The competition aims to highlight the extremely important message of wildlife conservation in an engaging and positive way, working with competition partner The Born Free Foundation, an international wildlife charity that campaigns to "Keep Wildlife in the Wild".

Pictured: Almost time to get up, by Charlie Davidson. A raccoon in Newport News, Virginia. Source: Comedy Wildlife Photography Awards Twitter page.

Your thoughts on the news...

Yes, it is important to stand up for our communities because if something was wrong that shouldn't be, we would want to help.

Tessa & Evie

I think we should all project our voices and stand up for our community. I think that the Kayapo tribe are doing the right thing. No matter what the cost their voices need to be heard!

Hebe - Age 10

I don't think so because sometimes the community can be wrong. Sometimes the communities are right.

Mamie - Age 8

What was your opinion on this week's news? Visit our discussion area, found here:

www.picture-news.co.uk/discuss

to share your thoughts!

Yes, I would stand up for my community because if someone was in trouble I can help.

Abigail - Age 10

/ think...

YOUR COMMENTS

Share your thoughts on our online discussion board:
www.picture-news.co.uk/discuss

Email: help@picture-news.co.uk Tweet: @HelpPicture or post to: Picture News Ltd, Colber Lane, Bishop Thornton, Harrogate, North Yorkshire, HG3 3JR